DR. BERNBAUM ON ANTI-SUFFRAGE.

A. Ernest Bernbaum spoke on Friday, February 19, on the subject "Why the Massachusetts man intends to vote against the Woman Suffrage Amendment next fall." Suffrage will, said Dr. Bernbaum, be defeated by a majority of seventy to two hundred and fifty thousand. Recently, Dr. Anna Shaw, speaking at Arlington, said, "Woman Suffrage rests upon one thing—that we do not have a representative form of government as long as the laws are not made by the people—Women are people." She argued that what is fair and just for one unit of society is for another. But, said Dr. Bernbaum, an argument of that character will not carry weight with the men of Massachusetts. If this sweeping generalization is true, children do not need to be protected by child labor laws, they (one unit of society) can work as long as adults. Dr. Shaw often quoted "Equal rights for all, special privileges for none." Dr. Bernbaum referred to the exemption from military duty which is a special privilege.

The argument that will have weight with Massachusetts men is whether it will better political and social conditions. The men, said Dr. Bernbaum, think it will not. For to add women voters will only increase the size of the indifferent vote, and this always means weakening in administration. He argued that woman suffrage would add to the indifferent vote, because many women are not desirous of voting. Therefore, said Dr. Bernbaum, because the men to not believe women want the vote, and do believe that the passing of the suffrage amendment will weaken government, they will vote against it. In concluding Dr. Bernbaum said the difference between government and organization corresponded to the difference between man and woman. Government stands for civilization, which is the church knows the world operates through persuasion and enlightenment. The former is better suited to men the latter better suited to women.

READING BY NICHOLAS VACHEL LINDSAY.

Nicholas Vachel Lindsay gave a recital of his poems on Friday, February 19, in Billings Hall. In introducing Mr. Lindsay, Miss Bates referred to him as an "inspired tramp" and "a Lincoln man," like Lincoln a "lover of the plain people."

The first poem, "The Congo," revealed the remarkable sense of rhythm and vigor of expression for which Mr. Lindsay is famous. In "The Fireman's Ball," this use of rhythm and word sounds combined with the realistic effect gained by chanting, was particularly effective. The "Santa Fe Trail" and the "Harvest in Kansas," typically American poems, revealed Mr. Lindsay's interest in the commonplace and ability to make it live.

Mr. Lindsay has a range of imagination which makes nothing unavailable as material for his poems. While they often border on the grotesque there is a sincerity and forcefulness which makes one for the moment see with the poet.

Another side of Mr. Lindsay's poetry, his delicacy of expression, was revealed in the "Chinese Nightingale," a weird and fantastic oriental poem, and in the final poem, "Judith the Dancer." "The Rose and the Lotus," broader in significance showed the same qualities.

While often crude, there is a genuineness and purpose in Mr. Lindsay's poetry which promises even greater poems.

WHAT DO WE CARE?

I suppose it is a commonplace to say that we take things too seriously here in college, but it is a commonplace which we might do well to bear more constantly in mind. Our whole life here is necessarily exaggerated; in such a community it is turned in upon itself of necessity, and each phase of it receives an undue emphasis. Our fullest interest, our highest enthusiasm, and our deepest despair are daily called forth, and more easily communicated from one to another in our eminently social life. In the excitement and pressure of living it is hard to stop to consider the worth of the things which claim such extravagant attention. But perhaps we would live more happily if we could bring ourselves up short with the slogan "What do I care?" I suppose all of us have had the experience of leaving college for a time, and, after a little, looking back with something like wonder upon the things for which we cared so intensely, and finding that they do not matter at all, not even the marks over which we agonized until the credit cards came out. It only needs a taste of the outside world to restore our balance. Even a mental journey will sometimes do the trick, although it is evident that even by taking thought one cannot escape the ultra-seriousness of college altogether. For where, but in college would one find an article seriously written to combat the seriousness of life?

OPPORTUNITY RAPS.

This is the last call for contributions to the writing contest of the National Young Woman's Christian Association, at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. This is too great an opportunity to miss. Remember that the editors of the "Century," "Everybody's," and the "Woman's Home Companion" are to act as judges, and this will be an excellent chance to get your work before representative editors. The prizes are liberal, and worth trying for. Even if you have no ambition to gain fame or money, the Christian Association needs your support, and none of us want to see Wellesley unworthily represented at San Francisco. Remember that any manuscript written during your College course can be submitted. All contributions should be sent to Alathena Johnson, Pomeroy, or Katherine Balderston, Beebe, on or before March 6.

The following are the specifications. For further details, consult the notice on the NEWS bulletin board.

1. Drama: theme, any general theme dealing with the progress and development of woman, or some phase of a distinctive principle of Association work. First prize, one hundred dollars; second, fifty dollars.

2. Short story: any general theme dealing with the progress and development of woman, or some phase of a distinctive principle of Association work. Length, not to exceed six thousand words. First prize, one hundred dollars; second, fifty dollars.

3. Bible story: retelling in modern language anything related in the Bible, such as the life of an individual or description of some incident. Length, one thousand five hundred to six thousand words. First prize, fifty dollars; second, twenty-five dollars.

4. Article: (for suggested topics see notice on NEWS bulletin board). Prize: First, twenty-five dollars; second, fifteen dollars. Special prize for "What a Girl should Contribute as her Share of the Marriage Partnership," one hundred dollars.

5. Verse: (1) Song. (2) Hymn. These may be general, but a song for general Association occasions, and a national Association hymn are especially desired. Length: not over eighteen lines. An additional award for music to accompany words will be given. Prizes: Song, first, twenty-five dollars; second, fifteen dollars. Hymn, first, twenty-five dollars; second, fifteen.

GERMAN TRANSLATION.

TO THE EDITOR WELLESLEY COLLEGE NEWS.

May I inquire through the columns of the COLLEGE NEWS whether there are, perhaps, former German students who might like to undertake translations from the German? I occasionally find books that I so much wish were available in English. One such a novel by Emil Franzos, Der Pojaz, a story of Jewish life in Galicia, which seems to me quite the best thing I know on the way of living and thinking of the type of Jews who form the bulk of our Jewish immigration.

I should be glad to lend it to any competent person who would like to translate it.

Yours truly,
EMILY G. BALCH.

NOTICE.

Sophomores and Juniors who wish to compete for the office of reporters on the NEWS Board are asked to watch their class bulletin-boards for instructions. In the meantime, any write-ups of events which are sent in, will count to their credit.

FROM GERMANY.

EDITORS' NOTE. We are very glad to print these two letters that Professor Mueller has recently received from Frau Elspeth Mueller Struss, who was an instructor in the German Department at Wellesley from 1890-1900. It is a privilege to learn about the humanitarian work in Europe from one who is actually helping and is, at the same time, intimately connected with us.

The second letter is an answer to one sent from Wellesley in December with an enclosure of fifty dollars, which various Alumnæ (and a few undergraduates) contributed towards the aid of the sufferers.

I.

1. December.

Last Sunday I paid my first call at the military hospital in Eppendorf. The orderly in charge took me into a large room where there were twenty men, badly wounded all of them, who had come from Brussels that morning.

I could not speak at first and my eyes grew dim as I saw the havoc that had been wrought on all these young human bodies. Here was an arm missing, there a leg,—one was shot through his breast, the other through his neck, etc. I rallied quickly, though, and stepping up to the bedside of each tried to anticipate some of their wishes. They were so grateful for lemonade which I put to their lips in "beak-cups," for apples and grapes that I tried to fix daintily, for soft honey cake or Lindt Chocolate I put into their mouths. I also lighted cigars for some of them, wrote postal cards and letters to their families. I read aloud to them and left some papers and pamphlets near the beds of those who could sit up a little. The aristocratic volunteer was as approachable as the miner or farmers, the sergeant as human as the socialist workman. They were brought together here from Berlin and Westfalia, from the Rhinelands and Silesia —and though they spoke different dialects they were all equally heroic in the way they bore their terrible affliction. Only two of them cried, but no wonder their nerves were shaken after the fearfully long and painful railway journey.

Quickly we all became friends, and they talked to me as confidingly as to a sister. When I left they begged me to return soon, and I promised that I would come every Sunday and Wednesday.

If I only had more funds now! You know that at the outbreak of the war, the officials voted voluntarily and unanimously, for a considerable reduction of their salaries. Personally we can get along comfortably on what we get now, but how much—oh, how very much!—we could do for others now if we had more means!

We are sending a good many things to the soldiers at the front, too. In answer to Carla's and my own "poetic" little Christmas messages that we attached to the things we had knitted, we continually receive cards or letters now with thanks and also with all sorts of—modest enough—requests for articles that are needed or simply desired: they range from woolen shawls and gloves to cigarettes and chewing tobacco.

II.

"Your third remittance of one hundred marks has just arrived. Many, many thanks to you and all the other dear givers. In order that you, too, may have some pleasure from it, I must tell you how I disposed of part of it. Twenty marks (five dollars) went to a maiden lady of fifty-two, who has to help take care of her aged mother and who has been trying to support herself by knitting (which she does very poorly). She and her mother were nearly starved and did not wish to ask for aid of the government. I heard of her through the dry-goods store for which she is knitting and where they have given her work out of sympathy for her plight. She was receiving only eighty pfennig, (twenty cents), for one pair of stockings! From now on she receives just twice as much for her knitting and is told that the extra money is from 'Friends of Germany in America."

"The G———s are receiving just one-third of their salary now; two of her sons are at the front, leaving families behind to be provided for. One of the young wives was a singer and now that the need is so great, has accepted a short engagement as dancer, though her youngest child is only a few months old. Evenings and late into the night she sews on her costumes by the light of a Christmas-tree candle, for she cannot afford large candles and petroleum is no longer to be had. (The people in the country either sit in darkness or use candles, which are beginning to get scarce.) The little baby is an expense, too, especially when her mother has to hire some one to take care of her during theater hours. I have sent the woman a little alcohol lamp, costing ten marks.

"Two of the severely wounded soldiers in whom I was particularly interested are convalescing so well that possibly they may be able to be moved to a hospital in their own home—Westphalia. I have offered to take care of them on the way home. I shall hire an automobile to take us as far as Westphalia, where Hedwig will help out with her machine. Then the men can have a visit from their good wives!

"To the soldiers on the eastern frontier who sit all day in the dark trenches and at night watch and fight, I have sent several pounds of candles and tobacco. The latter they begged for to drive away their awful thirst.

"Then there are so many hungry people and peddlars knocking at one's door. I try to give each one something or buy something form him.

"Then there is 'Koellwitz,' poor fellow (from the Rhine district), who arrived the other day fatally wounded and suffering from pneumonia! He groaned and raved fearfully and nobody had any hope of his recovery. I instructed the nurse in charge to buy everything, at my expense, that could be of any use: pillows, blankets, wine, ice. So far she has merely asked for currant juice, of which I had a plenty to provide. Yesterday, to my joy, I heard that he may yet be saved! When he is once out of danger I shall be able to do all sorts of things for him. Oh! You cannot think how nice it is to know that you have a penny in your pocket when such opportunities to give present themselves.

"Once more a thousand thanks to all you dear givers over there whose names I have inscribed in my heart! I was rejoiced to hear that many of you were of pure American stock."

A Sober Second Thought.

Dr. Von Mach's address, February 14, was welcomed by many of us who desire to give a courteous hearing to all sides of the great question of the war. But from the fact that we refrained, at the end of his two-hours' speech, from asking questions or raising objections, it must not be inferred that we agreed to his assertions. The many questions that surged up in the mind of one listener would have precipitated, at least, another two-hours' discussion. His attempt, for instance, to refute the charge against Germany, of militarism, seemed insufficiently supported by proof, and his appeal on moral grounds to Wellesley girls to protest against exportation of arms and munitions was plausible but misleading. One of his listeners would have liked to ask him why he did not agree with Dr. Kuno Francke, head of Harvard's Germanic Museum and "one of the most uncompromising champions of Germany's cause in this country." The Literary Digest of February 13, quotes Dr. Francke as follows: "I do not wish to emphasize the fact that the proclamation of an embargo on arms and munitions of war would be an altogether illusory thing. Arms and other implements of war would, if our Government established an embargo on them, be shipped from this country to Havana, or to Vigo, or to some other neutral port and would reach their destination from there without any hindrance. What I do wish to emphasize is that the establishment of such an embargo would inevitably bring our government into conflict with England and might drive us into war with England. As a man of German blood I might welcome the help which would accrue to Germany by such a conflict between the United States and England. But as an American citizen I cannot possibly support a policy which would bring the terror of war to our own country. What I feel bound to support, as an American citizen, is a policy which holds itself strictly within the now accepted rules of neutrality, although, to my regret, this policy, through circumstances over which the United States has no control, practically turns out to the advantage of England and to the detriment of Germany.

Dr. Francke's letter closes with the following earnest plea:

"We have every opportunity in this country to make felt what is best in German character and life. Let us continue to do so; let us continue to have a prominent part in all endeavors for political, civic, and industrial progress; let us stand for the German ideals of honesty, loyalty, truthfulness, devotion to work; let us cultivate our language, our literature, and our art; let us fearlessly defend the cause of our mother country against prejudices and aspersions. But let us refrain from political organizations which would set Germans in this country apart as a class by themselves. Such an attempt would lead not to the raising, but to the degradation, of the German name in this country. It would foster hatred instead of sympathy; and only by gaining the sympathy of the majority of the American people can we German-Americans help the cause of our mother country."

Surely the editor of the Boston Herald was right in commending Dr. Francke's letter for "sanity of vision combined with moral earnestness."

PEACE COMMEMORATION SERVICE.

Before the present war began, a national committee arranged a series of services in commemoration of the hundred years of peace which has existed between the United States and England. Wellesley's service was held last Sunday night, February 21 at 7 o'clock, in the chapel with Dr. Hamilton Wright Mabie of New York, as the speaker.

Miss Pendleton, in conducting the service, commented on the significance of the day at Wellesley February 20 is the birthday of our founder, Mr. Durant. February 21, 1915, is the sixtieth anniversary of the birth of Alice Freeman Palmer. On February 22, Wellesley joins with all America in honoring the first great hero of our country, George Washington, therefore, the day assigned to Wellesley for commemoration of the long peace with our mother country, England, came at the time when we were honoring three persons who have done much for the English-speaking race.

Dr. Mabie opened his address by citing the illustration of the Japanese shrine at Port Arthur to the Russian soldiers who died during the battle there. At the time of the dedication of that memorial, a general said, "We have never been enemies; we were only, for the time, foes." It is the same with America and England. The war which was ended at the Treaty of Ghent (ratified February 17, 1915), was a sequel to the fratricidal war of the Revolution. The same energy, audacity and genius for government which made Englishmen masters at the very ends of the earth, made the Englishmen of the new world tenacious of their rights. The stubborn Englishmen at home were not able to conquer the stubborn Englishmen of the colonies. They had to make a treaty, but the mother country could not accept it in spirit for a long while. The thirty years between the Revolution and the War of 1912, was the myth-making period of American history. Great heroes were discovered, and laurels flourished on the most barren hillsides. We are only just beginning to appreciate, however, the real greatness of George Washington.

During those thirty years, the hatred for the British increased because of their continued contempt for the new nation. The War of 1812, which was fought with no definite beginning or ending, brought satisfaction to neither country. The two issues about which the nations went to war were quietly ignored in the Treaty of Ghent. All the conditions for a permanent peace were adverse. The stage was set for another tragic war, but in a hundred years the curtain has never been rung up. It has been no easy reconciliation,—no happy accident. Peace has been won, through self-control, self-sacrifice and patience on both sides.

Another great factor in the reconciliation has been the kinship between us and the mother country. Through a common language there has been the free interchange of ideas between mind and mind, between continent and continent. We own Shakespeare in common. Our race speaks through him and others, and we understand the language.

There is one deep and abiding understanding between the two peoples; viz.: that they have the same sense of honor, and hold the same moral standards. The English-speaking peoples all hold the same faith,—belief in man. This is the fundamental creed, which gives racial passion, racial work and racial destiny, which will bear fruit when the narrow husks of nationalism drop away. It is idle to pray for peace. We must pray for strength to do justice, for justice is the one path to peace.

The music of the service was in keeping with its theme. The choir sang as anthems, "How lovely are the messengers that preach us the gospel of peace," from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," and also Professor Macdougall's Peace Anthem. The congregation joined in singing "America, the beautiful," and George Huntington's hymn, "Two Empires by the Sea."

UNION CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION MEETING.

At the Christian Association meeting in the chapel, Wednesday, February 17, Miss Scudder spoke on the relation between temporal and eternal things, applying it directly to this Lenten season. Lent is a discipline because it stands as a privilege, the joy of communion with the eternal. We get it in a flash, perhaps, from simply watching the sunset. It is that instantaneous consciousness of something beyond. To get this, a certain amount of solitude is necessary, a withdrawal from our temporal activities. People say we can't withdraw because our religion is that of time. What we must do is to find the relation between time and eternity. We cannot give up our relation to the absolute. We must feel the permanence behind that flux of light, otherwise we get dizzy. Right now, we can plan to withdraw at least fifteen minutes every day, get down on our knees and contemplate what truth we have. Thus we gain a practical mysticism from a life of devotion in thought and love. Even if we are disturbed in thought, we can go on loving. Love is the conjunction between time and eternity. Make this true reconciliation. We can't love in a rush. It is necessary to withdraw from people or from duty till we get a perspective. In this way, we may begin at the highest point, the doctrine of the Trinity which is the effort of human thought to assert that there is actual love at the heart of the absolute Being. The eternal is love, therefore we must think about the love of God, the love proceeding from the Father, that is creating and restraining all humanity, and the daily life of our Lord. Then we pass the gulf between eternity and time.

In this way, we can help the world more than by any other activity. We are all so cold and love only when we like. We should love our enemies and we cannot unless we love God. And so we, too, can travel the way of the Cross through this Lenten period, and, at last, see face to face the glory of the Lord, and know as we are known.

PARLIAMENT OF FOOLS.

THE ADVANTAGES OF A COLLEGE EDUCATION.

A Curriculum of Courses.

I. Art.

I draw the nicest pictures
That ever have been "drew;"
Of birds and books and kewpie-kids—
And maybe one of you!
And when I seem to take down notes,
With an intelligent smile,
And watch my teacher's every look—
I'm drawing 'er all the while!

II. Archæology.

It's a big word—archæology—
More learned than zoology—
But I know one branch of it, by cricks!
And that's the branch called ceramics.
At teas I always wash the china,
And sure, than teas, there's nothing finer.

III. Astronomy.

Astronomy! well I should say!
I study that by night and day.
About each star I know a yarn—
Those stars that come out at the Barn!

IV. Botany.

I know the Tailby price of every flower
That ever bloomed in hothouse or in bower;
For have I not them sent at each election
To prove to those elected my affection?

V. Economics.

They say that on economy
Is based the whole felicity
Of all our domesticity.
If this is true, I hate to think
To what unfathomed depths I'll sink
When I try to pay the bills I owe
With a two-cent stamp plus—zero.

VI. Education.

Be broad, be broad, but not too broad,
The gym. instructor cries;
And oh; how wonderfully well
To studies this applies.
Of course we have a separate course
To learn of education,
But what's the use when College life
Itself is variation?
We've groups for this, and groups for that;
How can our gymnast minds grow fat?

VII. English.

Behold the English of the News—
And emulate it if you choose!

VIII. Geography

Of all the modes of learning
There isn't any one
That comes up to experience
For efficiency and fun.
I live right on the corridor
With girls from Mass. to Mi
If it isn't learning g'ography
Pray tell me what it "iss."

IX. Mathematics.

See Course V.

X. Music.

There's a phonograph a-carolling across the narrow hall,
Where the music-lovers love to grow;
And the music's not immortal; and I don't love it a'-tall
When my thoughts at best are very slow.
And it pulses through the stillness of the quiet study-hour
That surrounds that singing organ like a large eternal light;
And they've fed it with a needle and it starts to play again—
Won't the proctor ever still the noisome blight?

And now it's whirring onward thro' the first few tinny notes;
Why don't they start at where the music starts?
And now it makes a squawking sound like wild geese clearing throats—
I wish they's skip preliminary parts!
And all around the Victor there's a sea without a shore
Composed of hopeless waves of dull regret;
I'd like a chance to recompense the music evermore,
For the little the machinery forgets . . . .

And "Meadowbrook" goes babbling on Along down "By the Sea,"
While "Just a little love" "At Dawn,"
Is one too much for me.
I beat my hair and rend my breast,
And splash the ink on high;
There's only one escape from IT—
And I'm too young to—die—!

Come hear the Vic. in study-hour, in study-hour, in study-hour;
Come hear the Vic. in study-hour (it isn't hard to find it.)
And you shall tear your hair with me and hope that you shall never be Forced to hear Vic. in study-hour (it isn't hard to find it!)

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Shubert: Pauline Frederick in "Innocent."

Keith's: Last week, Nazimova in "Marion Craig Wentworth's "War Brides."

Majestic: Faversham in "The Hawk." Next week, "The Lilac Domino," light opera, with the Andreas Dippie Opera Company and Symphony Orchestra.

Plymouth: "Too Many Cooks." Next week, "The Third Party," with Taylor Holmes and Walter Jones.

Cort: Richard Bennett in "Nearly Married."

Boston Opera House: Henry Jewett Players in "The Taming of the Shrew." Next production "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Hollis: One week only. Maud Adams in "Quality Street," and the new J. M. Barrie comedies, "The Ladies' Shakespeare" and "The Legend of Leonora." Next Monday, Ann Murdock in "A Girl of To-day," a comedy by Porter Emerson Browne.

Boston Theater: "Ben-Hur." Next week, Pavlowa with her Russian Ballet and Orchestra.

Colonial: Leo Ditrichstein in "The Phantom Rival."

Tremont: "The Miracle Man." Next week, "Good-Night, Nurse!"

Wilber: "A Pair of Sixes."

Castle Square: "Common Clay."

Toy Theater: Gertrude Kingston in two new Shaw plays, "Great Catherine" and "Overruled."

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The Henry Jewett Players entered the eighth week of their season at the Boston Opera House, last Monday.

The regular weekly offering has its premiere—"The Taming of the Shrew." This comedy resembles "The Merry Wives of Windsor" in its rich humours, its quick play of farce illuminating the serious study of life and of human nature that underlies it.

For the sixth time the members of the company will be presented in a new set of roles. The Petruchio and the Katharine will be played by newcomers to the company, Leonard Willey, lately with Margaret Anglin, and Urba Marshal, but the other parts will be in the hands of familiar players.

The next production after "The Taming of the Shrew" will be "The Midsummer Night's Dream;" and a notable performance is promised.—Adv.

VASSAR DEBATE TRIP.

Will those who are planning to go to Vassar for the debate please sign their names on the slip for that purpose on their respective class bulletin boards as soon as possible, in order that we may be able to know how many can go? If enough sign, we will be able to get a "party ticket" at reduced rates and possibly a special car. The "party ticket" is for a specified number, so those not signing will have to pay the regular fare. The debate is March 20. For further particulars and arrangements please see Elizabeth Endel, 160 Lake House.

LECTURE BY PROFESSOR BOSE.

On Friday, February 19, at 3.15, Professor Bose of Calcutta lectured in the Barn under the auspices of the Departments of Botany, Zoology and Psychology. In introducing Professor Bose, Dr. Ferguson said that he was one of the beacon lights of modern science, pointing the way to correlating the various fragments discovered in recent years. Professor Bose is not only a botanist of international reputation, but is a prominent chemist, physicist, philosopher and zoologist.

In his lecture Professor Bose showed the remarkable apparatus he has contrived for measuring and recording the responses made by plants to nervous and mechanical stimuli. The results of these records show that the plants correspond in their responses in an almost uncanny way to the responses made by human beings. Under the influence of alcohol the plant becomes maudlin—first excited, then depressed. Ether acts as an anæsthetic, carbolic acid gas suffocates it. A cloud passing in the sky causes depression; over-much food makes the plant stupid. By making a continuous record of the plant's answer to stimuli for twenty-four hours, asking it if it was awake every half hour, Professor Bose discovered that the plant sleeps from 6 to 9 A.M., and gradually wakes up until it has full energy at noon.

He has also found that the nervous power of a plant may atrophy. A plant raised away from all unfavorable conditions is defective, and has at first no power of conduction. Its powers may be trained, however, and habit developed in it.

The lecture was concluded by a most dramatic experiment in which the death struggles of a plant, gradually killed by heat, were shown on the screen. The apparatus was so arranged that the motion of the plant was shown in a mirror and the light from the mirror thrown on the screen. As the temperature was raised the plant at first relaxed and the light moved towards the left. But as the heat gradually reached 60 degrees C. the light moved more slowly, then, as a sign of the final convulsion, dashed sharply across to the right.

CIRCULO CASTALLANO RECEPTION.

The February meeting of the Circulo Castellano was held Friday evening, February 13, in A. K. X. Society House. This meeting was in the form of a reception to some Spanish people. The guests of honor were Mrs. Lincoln, daughter of the woman who founded the college in Spain which Wellesley helps support, Senor Rivera, president of the Spanish Club of Boston, Senor Cervino, Cuban Consul, and Senor Blanco a doctor of philosophy. Mrs. Lincoln gave a very interesting talk on the Museo del Prado of Madrid, after which Senor Rivera recited a Spanish poem. Among the invited guests were Miss Cutler from Auburndale, Miss Hawes of the Latin Department, Miss Sullivan of the English Department and Dr. Graves of the Botany Department.

ALUMNÆ DEPARTMENT.

THE SPECIAL MAGAZINE NUMBERS.

Those desiring to order extra copies of either the March or the April number of the MAGAZINE should do so at once.

The March number will contain the official report of the Alumnæ Committee on Restoration and Endowment and the report of the February meeting of the Graduate Council. It will also contain an account of ways and means by which the Alumnæ contribution was raised, an account from each undergraduate class of its contribution, a list of the largest gifts from outside sources, so far as these are allowed to be announced, an instalment of the Letters from Elizabeth, to bring the Wellesley of 1875 closer to the Wellesley of 1915 and of the future, and various other items. The April number will be, as regards the Alumnæ section, a memorial to Professor Conan. Miss Balch, Miss Scudder and Miss Converse are in charge of this memorial number.

Both of these numbers of the MAGAZINE will be desired by all Alumnæ for the chapters of Wellesley history which they provide. If orders are not given in advance, some disappointments may occur. Orders should be sent to the regular subscription editor, Miss Adele Martin.

"MINISTRARI."

Our watchword was erased from its wall
So as by fire. Now does it seem to stand
Awhile not as before in College Hall,
But read anew by a swift-answering land.
Ministered unto 'tis indeed to-day
Until once more it reads the olden way.

FACULTY AND CAMPUS NOTES.

A brief handbook of Italian painting, thoroughly improved in regard to the latest results of comparative and historical criticism and holding all the facts in due proportion, has long been needed and is interestingly and competently supplied in "A Short History of Italian Painting," recently published by Professor Alice Van Vechten Brown and William Rankin, Instructor in History of Italian painting, 1903-05.

Mrs. Estelle M. Hurll, 1882, Instructor in Ethics, 1884-91, has combined in her recent book, "The Home Book of Great Paintings," the inspiration of the historical setting in the wide range of subjects presented, the inspiration which comes from comprehending high themes and an appreciation of art and beauty. Mrs. Hurll presents fifteen (15) pictures by each of the seven great artists, Michelangelo, Titian, Raphael, Correggio, Van Dyck, Rembrandt and Murillo, telling the story of each picture clearly and simply, and also explaining the significant characteristics of the picture in prints of artistic execution.

Miss Ethel Bowman, 1900, formerly assistant in the Psychology Department, was prevented by the war from carrying out her plans to go to Constantinople, and is spending the year in study at Clark University, Worcester.

Professor Vida Scudder gave an address on the subject, "What Shall Socialists do After the War?" at an informal dinner under the auspices of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society at the Twentieth Century Club, Boston, on February 13. Professor Margaret Sherwood has a poem in the March "Scribner's," and Miss Helen Hull of the Department of English Composition, a story in the March "Harper's."

Professor Hart spoke on Russia at the regular Sunday evening service of the Wellesley Congregational Church on February 21. Miss Hetty S. Wheeler of the Department of Music sang.

The new building on College Hall Hill is rising with considerable rapidity. It is now possible for THE CHENANGO COUNTY,, N. Y., WELLESLEY BENEFIT.

On December 14, Genevieve Jacoby Eaton, 1909, called together the Wellesley girls of Norwich, N. Y., and the surrounding towns to interest them in making a contribution to the Restoration Fund. As a result of this meeting, the Wellesley women gave three performances of the Rainey pictures on December 31, and were gratified at selling $430 worth of tickets. When all bills were paid and the percentage that the theater demanded paid over, the sum of $150 was telegraphed to the Restoration Fund Committee.

The gratifying sum taken in was largely due to the untiring efforts of Genevieve Jacoby Eaton, 1909. The other Wellesley women who helped were Mary Reed Turner, 1890, Ruth Lincoln, 1904, Gertrude Gladding Hartigan, 1908, Gertrude Hicks Allen, 1909, Margaret Newton, 1911, Jean Newton, 1916, Eleanor Newton, 1918, all of Norwich, Helen Van Wagenan, 1892-94, and Zaida Lee, 1890-94, of Oxford, Ada Burt, 1904, of Guilford, and Grace Gladding Sanford, 1904, of Sherburne.
